

Singing Together in Church

A Kids Friendly Resource

TIPS FOR CHOOSING MUSIC FOR ALL AGES TO SING TOGETHER

- Give careful thought to WHAT we are inviting children to sing. Also WHY and HOW they are introduced and taught- much the same process as we would use when choosing any worship song.
- Make sure the words are telling the truth about God and allowing children to offer appropriate responses for their age and faith stage.
- Consider whether adults can sing the words without 'cringe'.
- Limit your range of songs so children get to know the ones your congregation love to sing.

"I think this is really important," says Malcolm Gordon, "If you want to sing together, you have to arrest the 'boredom' factor that largely comes from grownups. We aren't satisfied, or can't agree on what songs to sing, so we sing really widely. Many of the newer songs have a very short shelf life, and so 6 months after being introduced, we're over them. This dynamic is death to congregational singing, all the more with children present. When I lead the same programme for three weeks running at Preschool music, I find repetition increases the level of the kids' participation. They like to know what is being asked of them, Repetition and ritual increases their engagement, ownership and enjoyment (and is a blessing to their parents who aren't having to keep them on task when they're not interested).

- Choose melodies that are easy to pick up and words that live in our hearts beyond the Sunday worship.

"Don't be afraid to explore the hymn tradition of writing new words to well-known tunes. You could even write your own words that reflect your community's journey of faith to something your congregation already knows and enjoys," says Malcolm.

- Children's songs do not have to be action songs, but actions reinforce the words so they can be learnt quicker and help to give your whole self to the worship. Actions are also cues for non-readers.

"Engaging our bodies in worship also develops a deeper kind of learning in us. Faith is not just a head-thing. It's not just ideas and concepts. It's also action and movement. Our worship is most meaningful when it recognises and honours our embodied nature." Says Malcolm.

- Don't just use actions for the upbeat songs. Sign language with slower worship songs are particularly effective and adults often feel more comfortable doing those kind of actions. Signing to music can be a very moving worship experience for all.
- Some songs may not work in church, but they are great in the context of a children's programme to let off steam and have fun, e.g. Father Abraham, I just wanna be a sheep, baa, baa, baa, baa!
- Introduce some 'oldie but goodie' songs. Invite someone older to share a song with the children that is important to them including their memories of singing it as a child.
- Some "old songs" can be 'jazzed up' with a different music setting if musicians are capable. Make up new actions or accompany them with percussion.
- Try not to say: 'Now we will have a song for the children'. Children can enjoy a wide range of songs – so can adults. You can't please everyone all the time with music choices, but don't create a division between songs (just) for children and songs (just) for adults.

"I was sharing at a church one Sunday when the worship leader said: 'Well I suppose because we have the Kids Friendly coach here we should have a children's song'. He then dragged up some very embarrassed intermediate age young teens to lead us in an action song. It was obvious that this was alien to all in the church and so it really didn't work. And of course I had to do all the actions against my will because all eyes were on me!" says Jill Kayser.

- Use modern technology sensitively – choose what is suitable in your context. There are some good iTunes and YouTube videos that introduce music with sound and visual quality that most church musicians could not replicate live and can enhance worship.
- If using a DVD have someone LEAD the congregation from the front too.
- Keep the volume at a comfortable level - so you can sing and hear yourself and the person beside you.
- Use CDs/video clips to watch and listen to as well, not just join in and sing with. Or as background to an activity e.g. during prayers or the offering.

A selection of songs.... a beginning to use with children in church, holiday clubs and schools

(NB choose lyrics carefully if using in schools. Don't ask children to make a faith declaration in songs. The ones with * could be suitable)

Presbyterian Church of Aotearoa New Zealand

TRIM test for choosing a song

Teach- what does the song teach about God, Jesus, Christian faith practices? Is it biblically accurate and appropriate for the learning outcome?

Relevant- is the song relevant to the children in this context? (Mainly Christian/non-Christian children in Church, Kids club or CRE in schools)

Interesting- do the children enjoy singing it?

Meaning- do the students understand the meaning of the words or is there too much Christian jargon? Does it ask the singer to make a faith confession that is not appropriate (see relevant context)

Where to listen to songs before purchasing and knowing if suitable?

The easiest way is to open an itunes account, then search for an individual song, listen before purchasing ($1.79- $2.39 each) Lyrics and Music accompaniment are usually available on the websites as listed below:
